R.O. COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

Believe Official Account of Shooting Victims

St. Catharines, Man., Feb. 1.—Preliminary investigation into three charges against Lawrence Duggan, returning soldier for Serbia, of creating rumors of war, laborer, George Horning and William Henry from the same town, supplied to him for use in the election election was resumed here yesterday morning.

G. H. Walker, prosecutor of King's bench, and clerk of election court, produced documents transmitted to him by Clerk of Court in Chancery at Ottawa, including lists purporting to have been used by the accused returning officers.

W. H. Knott appeared for the defense and E. L. Howell for the crown. Formal evidence of deputy returning officers and scrutineers was put in, and on the case for the Crown closing Mr. Howell stated that he did not propose to call any evidence for the defense.

Counsel then addressed court, and the learned magistrate declared that he would commit accused to take his trial at the next Assizes.

Czar Pardons His Subjects.

Calls Strikers Dupes and Tells Them to Go to Work.

To Come to the Emperor of All the Russias as a Rebellious Mob He Declares to be a Crime—Adjudges Them to Have Patience—Concludes His Address With the Words "May God Assist You."

St. Petersburg, Feb. 2.—Emperor Nicholas yesterday afternoon resumed at Tsarskoye-Selo a deputation of 34 workmen, representing the employees of the factories and workshops of St. Petersburg. The deputation was accompanied by Minister of Finance Rakusinoff and Governor-General Trofop, and proceeded by the Imperial train to Tsarskoye-Selo, where carriages were awaiting them at a point near the Imperial Pavilion. On arriving there, the workmen were admitted to one of the halls of the palace. The Emperor entered the hall, accompanied by Grand Duke George Mikhailovich, General Hosen, the Minister of the Imperial Court, and the commandant of the palace. The workmen bowed to His Majesty, who said:

"Good day, my children."
The workmen replied: "We wish Your Majesty good health."
The Emperor then said:

"Be Have concluded."

"I have summoned you to order that you may hear my words from myself, and communicate them to your companions. The recent lamentable case with such and such, but to avoid results, have occurred. I have now allowed you to be betrayed by traitors and enemies to our country. When they induced you to address a petition to me on your behalf, I was told that you were against me, and my Government at a point when all Russian workmen should be laboring untroubled in order that we might vanquish our obstinate enemy. Strikes and disorders, however, have occurred, and crowds to disorder which obliged me to call out troops. As a result innocent people were killed. I know that the lot of the workmen is not easy. Many things require improvement, but have patience."

"We will forgive. It is necessary to be just towards your employers and to consider the condition of our industry. But come to me as a rebellious mob in order to declare your wants in a crime. I will not tolerate the working class. I will take measures which will assure that everything possible will be done to improve their lot, and to secure an investigation of their demands through legal channels. I am convinced of the honesty of the workmen and their devotion to myself, and I pardon their transgressions. Return to your work with your tools, and carry out the tasks allotted to you."

"May God assist you."

Break Represents Brains.
At the conclusion of his speech, the Emperor told the members of the deputation to communicate his words to their comrades, and said he would supply them with printed copies of his address.

After leaving the palace, the deputation proceeded to a neighboring church, where they prayed, and after lighting those placed lighted candles before the shrine. Subsequently, they were given dinner at a building which formerly was the high school of Tsarskoye-Selo.

One of the members of the deputation proposed the health of the Emperor, which was drunk with cheers. At 4.30 p.m. the deputation drove to the Imperial Palace, where they took the train for St. Petersburg.

CHAPTER I.

SHE did not put the sacramental glass in her cork, as so invitations were sent out. These were delivered verbally by boarders' friends of seeing their friends present on Friday evening. It was really a scratch party of the bodiless, and they assembled as usual in the dining room on this special evening to play and not to work. Mrs. Train laid aside her eternal knitting. Miss Bull dispensed with her game of "patience." Mr. Granger sang his one song of the early Victorian epoch—somebody's sonnet when singers were scarce—and Mr. Harner wore his antiquated dress suit, in his black silk gown, her lace cap, and "the diamond." Mrs. Jersey looked so they assured her—quite the lady.

Was she a lady? No one ever called that feeling question, as it would have provoked an outbreak of most unpleasant reply. She admitted in expansive manner to having seen "better days," but what her actual past had been—and from her look she had no-one ever discovered.

Few friends presented themselves on this particular Friday evening, for it was extremely fuzzy, and one of them could afford a cab. Even those who patronized the hotel, those who had some distance to walk before they knocked at the Jersey door, and thus was a chance of losing their way. Either in light or darkness the house was hard to find, for it occupied the corner of a particularly private square away from the crowded street traffic.

It was quite an anomaly for old age. None of the guests was under fifty, save a newcomer who had arrived the previous week, and they wondered why he came among them. He was young, though plain looking, and he was fashionably dressed, though stout. This was the first time he had been present at Madame's reception, and he was exchanging his comments for coming to Bloomsbury. Mrs. Jersey introduced him as "Leonard Train, the distinguished poetist," although he had published only one book at his own cost, and even that production was unknown to the boarders.

"Pashanloo! So-called," said he to a tall, small voice which contrasted curiously with his massive proportions, "have overdone the business of society." "I must revert to the Dickens style. I have therefore taken up my residence here for a brief period to enjoy old world ways." Here he looked around with a smiling smile. "I am glad to find so rich a field to play in."

This doubtful compliment provoked Miss Bull. The boarders did not wish to be rude, but they felt it was impossible to approve of the young man. Not being sufficiently modern to court society, one and all disliked the idea of being "in a book." Mrs. Train, conscious of her weak grammar, looked uneasily at Miss Bull, who smiled grimly and then said to Mrs. Granger, "I am glad to find so rich a field to play in."

Mr. Granger, who had been waiting for this moment, was only too happy to know that one song and had sung it again of those in that very room. It was natural to suppose that he knew it by heart. All the same he produced his music and read the words as he sang. Mr. Granger played the organ, and Mrs. Train, who was as familiar with them as she was with the organ, sang the words as usual, and his hands accepted the apology as usual, so it was all very well.

"If Mrs. Train will play us the 'Carnegie Bird Quartet,'" Mrs. Jersey hastily intervened, "now please we shall be."

Mrs. Train obliged, and Madame, under cover of the music, talked with Leonard Train.

"They are most kind the guests," she said; "they are old and require to be humored."

"It's most amusing, Madame. I shall stop here three weeks to pick up tips."

"Oh, you must stay longer than that," said Madame, smiling and patting his hand, still in a motherly way. "Now that you have found us, we cannot lose you. By the way—here Mrs. Jersey's car became very sore."

"How did you do so early?"

"It was a friend of mine, Madame. The new that I wanted to get into the Dickens world and suggested this house."

"It was a friend of mine, Madame. The new that I wanted to get into the Dickens world and suggested this house."

Mrs. Jersey's "leaves" told more matter and paid a compliment. "That depends, Mr. Train. If the truth were spoken about you, for instance."

"It was really a very nice compliment, but Miss Bull, with unselfishness, replied it to the utterance by laughing politely. Train, who had already set his face for a smile, grew red, and Madame darted a look at Miss Bull quite out of keeping with her motherly manner. More than this, she spoke her mind. "I hope, Mr. Train, that you will be a little more of a son of us."

Miss Bull shrugged her thin shoulders and in direct contradiction to the traditions of the evening produced her pack of cards. To abstain on Friday evenings always annoyed her, and she made the best of it. Miss Bull seized the opportunity to show her indifference and enjoy by doing so her favorite pastime. She was a small, thin, dry old maid, with a pallid face and light black eyes. Her mouth was hard and smiled treacherously. No one liked her save Margery, the niece of Mrs. Jersey. But Margery was supposed to be queer, so her approval of Miss Bull mattered little.

"Perhaps Mr. Granger will oblige us with a song," suggested Madame, smoothing her hair, but still lawfully fidgeting.

Mr. Granger, who had been waiting for this moment, was only too happy to know that one song and had sung it again of those in that very room. It was natural to suppose that he knew it by heart. "You must ask him in here and introduce him. I should like to thank him for having recommended my house."

"We were going to have a conversation in my room," said Train diplomatically. "It's such a very fine room. I don't think I'll come in."

"Oh, but he must. I am young people. Will your friend remain here tonight?"

"If he comes at all," replied Leonard, looking at his watch; "but if he does he will not know if he'll turn up. It is now 9 o'clock."

"We usually drop in," said Madame. "But on this night I must break up at 10, as I have—she hesitated. 'I have business to do.'"

"I won't trouble you, Madame," said Train. "My friend and I can have supper in my room."

"That's just it," said Madame, and her voice became rather hard. "I beg, Mr. Train, that you and your friend will not set up late."

"Why not? We both wish to smoke and talk."

"You can do that in the daytime, Mr. Train. But my house is most respectable, and I hope you will be in bed before 11."

Leonard would have protested, as he objected to this sort of maternal government, but Mrs. Jersey rushed away and he was left to make the best of it. Before he could collect his wits a nervous case that he was wanted. My Mrs. Jersey's house, he said and hurried out of the room. Mrs. Jersey overheard the noise.

"I suppose his friend is called George," she thought, and frowned. Her recollections of that name were not pleasant. However, she thought no more about the matter, but sailed across to Miss Bull. "The music doesn't suit you."

please you, Miss Bull," she said to rather an odd look. "It's very good," replied the old maid, smiling the curls. "But I have heard it before."

"You may not have the chance of hearing it again," said Madame. "It's a world of change," replied Miss Bull to her sharp voice. "Margery was that a heart?"

Margery pointed a fat finger in the card in question. "Miss Bull, I must tell something about her eyelid getting worse. Madame knew that this was just done to annoy her, as Miss Bull's sight was excellent. To revenge herself she took Margery away. 'Go and tell the servants to send up the eggs and sandwiches,' she said sharply."

Margery went lively. She was a huge girl twenty years of age and apparently very stupid. Why damn little Miss Bull, who loved no one, had taken in her no-one knew, but the two were inseparable. Seeing this, Madame sent Margery hard at work in the kitchen.

"You can do that in the daytime, Mr. Train. But my house is most respectable, and I hope you will be in bed before 11."

CHAPTER I.

SHE did not get the sacramental phrase on her cheeks, as no fortifications were sent out. These were delivered verbally by borderous denials of seeing their friends present on Friday evening. It was really a scratch party of the maddest and they assembled as usual in the drawing room on this especial evening to play and not to work. Mrs. Thine had added her eternal knitting. Miss Bull dispensed with her game of "patience." Mr. Granger sang his own set of the early Victorias—sometimes twice when singers were scarce—and Mr. Harmer wore his accustomed dress suit. In her black silk gown, her hair cut and "the diamond" Mrs. Jersey looked so they assumed her—quite the lady.

Was she a lady? No one ever asked that leading question, as it would have provoked an innuendo or a most unpleasant reply. The admitted in expensive notions to having seen "better days," "what was her actual past had been—and from her looks she had one—soon ever discerned.

Few friends presented themselves on this particular Friday evening, for it was extremely foggy, and none of them could afford a cab. Even those who patronized the concert but line had soon dashed to wait before they looked at the Jersey thine, and then came a chance of losing their way. Either in light or darkness the house was hard to find, for it occupied the corner of a particularly private square frequented from the Oxford street traffic.

It was quite an anomaly for old age. None of the guests was under fifty. There was a woman who had arrived the previous week, and they wondered why he came among them. It was young, though plain looking, and he was rather loosely dressed, though stout. This was the first time he had been present at Madame's reception, and he was explaining the reason for coming to Shoombury. Mrs. Jersey introduced him as "young" and "the distinguished novelist," although he had published only one book at the very end, and even this production was unknown to the borders.

another manner. More than ten, and spoke to him. "I hope, Mr. Thine, that you will speak the whole truth of some of us."

Miss Bull shrugged her shoulders and in direct contradiction to the traditions of the evening produced her pack of cards. To abstain on Friday evenings always annoyed her, and since Madame had been doing this Miss Bull settled the opinion that her indifference and enjoyment by role his her favorite pastime. Her small, thin, dry, snail-like, with a pallid face and light black eyes. Her mouth was hard and smiling treacherously. No one liked her save Mrs. Jersey, the niece of Mr. Jersey. Mrs. Jersey was frequently asked to be queen, as her approval of Miss Bull's manner was the only one.

"Perhaps Mr. Granger will oblige us with a song," suggested Madame, musing her face, but still invariably turning.

Mr. Granger, who had been waiting for this moment, was only too happy. He knew but one song and had sung it dozens of times in that room. It was natural to suppose that he knew it by heart. All the same he produced his music and read the words as he sang. Margery played his accompaniment without looking at the notes. She was so familiar with them as she was with the moment when Mr. Granger's voice would crack. This night he cracked as usual, apologized as usual, and his laughter, which she apologized as usual, so it was all very pleasant.

"If Mrs. Thine will play us the 'Carnary Bird Quadrille,'" Mrs. Jersey hastily interposed. "How pleased we shall be."

Mrs. Thine obliged, and Madame, under cover of the music, talked with her. "You mustn't mind the guests," she said; "they are all and require to be amused."

"Most amusing, Madame. I shall soon have three things to pick up to you."

"You must stay just longer than that," said Madame, smiling and patting his hand, still in a modest way. "Now that you have found us out, we cannot leave you. By the way—here Mrs. Jersey's eyes became very searching—how did you find us out?"

"It was a friend of mine, Madame. He knew that I wanted to get into the Dickens world and suggested this house."

"Do I know the gentleman?" asked Madame, who seemed anxious.

"I don't think so. But he is coming to see me tonight."

"Oh, but he must. I love young people. Will your friend remain overnight?"

"He will if he comes at all," replied Madame, looking at Mrs. Thine. "But if the fog is very thick I don't know if he will turn up. It is now 9 o'clock."

"We usually dispense at all," said Madame, "but on this night I must break up at 10, as I have"—she hesitated—"I must trouble you, Madame," said Thine. "My friend and I can have supper in my room."

"That's just it," said Madame, and her voice became rather hard. "I beg Mr. Thine, that you and your friend will not sit up late."

"Why not? We both wish to smoke and talk."

"You can do that in the daytime, Mr. Thine. But my house is most respectable, and I hope you will be in bed before 11."

Leonard would have protested, as he objected to this sort of maternal government. But Mrs. Jersey rushed away and he was left to make the best of it. Before he could collect his wits a carriage came that he was wanted. "Hurry, hurry," he called, and hurried out of the room. Mrs. Jersey overheard the name.

"I suppose his friend is called George," she thought, and frowned. Her recollections of that name were not pleasant. However, she thought no more about the matter, but said to Mrs. Bull, "The music doesn't please you, Miss Bull," she said to her friend.

"It's very nice," replied she with a smile, but she had the odd habit of hating it again. "You may not like it," said Madame. "It's a world of change," replied Miss Bull.

"I am at Miss Bull's service," said Mrs. Jersey, smiling and looking at her. "I am at Miss Bull's service," said Mrs. Jersey, smiling and looking at her. "I am at Miss Bull's service," said Mrs. Jersey, smiling and looking at her.

Bull in her sharp voice. "Margery, what are you doing?"

Margery pointed a fat finger to the card in question, and Miss Bull must have noticed that her eyes were getting very close to the card.

"The light was excellent. To reverse herself she took Margery away. "No," said she, "I have been so busy."

Margery rose heavily. She was a huge girl twenty years of age and apparently very stupid. Why sharp little Miss Bull, who loved to be taken to her no one knew, but the two were laughing and talking as usual.

Margery was so kind as to turn her back on the card, and Miss Bull was very much of that type—the girl who is so good a deal of her one friend.

Madame had no idea of the reason for this, but at the present moment did not think it necessary to interfere. She was quite capable of crushing Miss Bull when she needed them.

Madame asked her hand. "I am at Miss Bull's service," said Mrs. Jersey, smiling and looking at her. "I am at Miss Bull's service," said Mrs. Jersey, smiling and looking at her. "I am at Miss Bull's service," said Mrs. Jersey, smiling and looking at her.

and plenty of white hair like spun silk. Her figure was stout, but she yet retained a certain comeliness which showed that she must have been a woman in her youth. Her manner was modest, but she showed a stern forcefulness.

"I don't trust the girl," said Mrs. Bull, "she is too likely as she might have been. As a rule, she is kind, but she is not really kind."

"I have been so busy," said Mrs. Bull, "I have been so busy."

Margery was so kind as to turn her back on the card, and Miss Bull was very much of that type—the girl who is so good a deal of her one friend.

"I thought he took her from his father's side, as the mother said. But she had been my face before. But I can't say."

"That is the tragic part of the story," he murmured at a masked ball at San Remo. The assassin was never recovered, but he was supposed to be some passionate Italian lover. My grandfather Lockwood, was a very good man, and I was called George Lockwood for many a long day. At the age of fifteen Mr. Lockwood died, and then a note came to my grandfather saying that Lord Derwent had proposed to allow me a small income."

"What was the reason?"

"I can't say. Perhaps it was because of the money."

"What does she know?"

"She knows where the marriage was celebrated and can prove that my birth is legitimate. That is why I leave her, Leonard."

"Why did you not speak to her to begin with?"

"I think it is better she should be in the quiet frame of mind," said Brenda. "She has never seen me since I was a small child, and I thought I would like to see her again."

"Why do you call yourself Brenda?" asked Trina.

George began to pace up and down the room.

"Trina made me that," he declared. "When my father was murdered at San Remo, Lord Derwent decided the marriage and refused to do so without my consent."

not have the chance of finding out further of her history. I was, Mr. Gardner suggested, honest, so, as that was as good a name as another, I took it. Hence Mrs. Jeremy can't possibly know me or why I came to see her, she will be wiser in the morning," added Brenda grimly.

"But she evidently saw in you some resemblance to her," said Trina.

"Evidently. From all I have heard Mrs. Jeremy was in my father's life, even though she was only a lady's maid. But I know very little about her. My business here is to leave her."

"But why has she kept silent all these years?"

Brenda shrugged his shoulders. "She has had no opportunity to speak out," he said. "That is why I wish you to find me soon, Leonard. She will require a little."

"And a larger one than that, George. A woman like Mrs. Jeremy would not part with such a secret for so small a sum."

"Oh, I can pay her what she demands when in possession of the estate. But at present she will want to see the color of my money."

Trina started into the fire, meditating on this queer story, which was quite a sensation. Then he saw in the star. "George," he said, "even if you were that you are the best, you won't get any money. Lord Derwent is still living, and the trustees are still living."

"Yes, and from all accounts he means to go on living, but the trustees do trust him. But the trustees are not so sure, when he is dead with it. If Mrs. Jeremy learns these facts she will come to terms on a promise of money when he is dead."

"You will speak to her in the morning."

"Yes. She is the only person who can help me. But I must be to the house of Dorothy Ward, and my only chance of seeing the mother is to go to her."

"I don't think Miss Ward cares much for her mother."

"Who could?" asked Brenda gratefully. "She is a worthless little creature. But I tell you, Leonard, that Trina was a most devoted woman, with a fine sense of duty. She will not let her daughter go as she is laid and will sell her to the highest bidder. As Lord Derwent."

"What's the matter?" asked Trina.

For answer Brenda quickly established both exclaiming and pointed to the door of the sitting room, which stood half open. "Just a word," he murmured to Trina, grasping his vest to escape attention. "I heard a footstep."

The two men stood in the darkness, looking at each other with a glance of light came from the fire and the door of the sitting room, which stood half open. "Just a word," he murmured to Trina, grasping his vest to escape attention. "I heard a footstep."

WHY YOU SHOULD USE

Red Rose Tea

Because it is always fresh and sweet.

My teas are shipped to St. John direct from where they grow, instead of being imported from London, where teas often lie in warehouse for several months.

The sales of Red Rose Tea are so large that any one lot of tea seldom remains on hand more than a few weeks; fresh lots arrive by every steamer.

Then, in the grocery store, Red Rose Tea is never dead stock. Except where being first introduced, the demand is such that each shipment is sold in a very few weeks.

From start to finish, Red Rose Tea is handled so that the consumer is sure to get it while it is fresh and sweet.

"Cause Miss Bull makes such a fuss and no one else does," said Jerry.

both had smiled. "Oh, that. Well, Madame give it to him? Jerry, never—her voice leaped an octave higher."

"-his mad?"

"That was because Jerry, with his hair on end and his face perfectly white, low into the kitchen. He went round and round the table, his ears starting from his head. The servants looked together in fear, and the cook started the tasting fork. They all agreed with her that the page was mad. Suddenly Jerry tumbled in a heap and, began to moan, with his face on the floor. "Oh, the blood—the blood!"

"What's he saying about blood?" asked the errand boy.

"Jerry heard to his feet. "She's dead. She's murdered!" he shrieked. "I see her all covered with blood. Oh, mother—oh, I want my mother!" And down he dropped on the floor again, kicking and screaming.

"The boy was excited out of his life, and the other servants, headed by the valet cook, ran up the stairs and found out Madame's sitting room, and no great disaster from the front door. The next moment they were out again, all shrieking under and calling loudly for the police. The evening boundary line was closed."

CARE AND TRAINING OF COLTS.
A well-bred, well-developed and Having had fifty years experience in raising farm stock I am convinced that colts can be fitted for the market with as great or greater profit, when can be realised from raising any other class of stock. A good mother will feed it until five months of age, and with the care that any good farm or driving horse should have, she will do her share of the farm work.

without injury and even with benefit to herself and offspring. By thus raising the dam the colt becomes gentle, tame and accustomed to sight-seeing, and the rattle of farm wagons and machinery, and thereby really becomes half educated, while at the same time he is developing growth, strength and action.

Young colts should not be shut in the quarters during the winter months. Sun, air and even snow and ice are preferable to confinement. The first year's care and feed of the colt cuts an important figure in its future. Well-cured rowen and early hay with a quart of oats a day and free access to water and salt, supplemented with good pasture feed for summer, are the essentials for promoting growth during its first

PRACTICAL POULTRY POINTS.
A broody hen spoils a fertile egg for table purposes by sitting on it for a few hours only, so collect your eggs regularly.

Winegar diluted in warm water is the best liquid to clean stained eggs. Brown-shelled eggs are no richer than white ones, but those who prefer tinted shells should immerse their eggs for an hour in strong tea water. Preserve your eggs in water glass when the market price is less than fifteen for a shilling. The eggs will then fetch ten or twelve keens ranging over an acre of grass and will far more than pay the rent of it, and so leave the herbage rent free to your dairy stock.

Fowls much improve the character of the stubble land over which they range.

Feed your fowls upon clean ground, not upon muddy yards and roadways, where much is trodden under foot.

Don't forget the importance of dis-

Don't forget the importance of feeding young chickens early, late, and in-between. Dry food is far better than stale, such as crushed grain, stale feed, and coarse biscuit meal. Feed up your chickens for a week or ten days before marketing them; any, half-fed fowl never fetch a remunerative price. In early spring and summer chickens always command a far better price in months later.

To Tell the Age of Sheep.—Dentition in sheep is irregular, depending entirely upon the care and food the animal receives, hence it is unreliable in some cases in determining age. A sheep has eight incisors in lower jaw. The two in the centre are called the "central incisors": one on each side of these the "internal lateral," one of

Under ordinary circumstances, dentition is as follows: "From three to fifteen months, the central permanent incisors are up and in wear; at from thirteen to twenty-four months, the internal lateral permanent incisors are up and in wear; at from twenty-seven to thirty-three months, the external

According to still another farmer, a ton of seed per acre was the rate per field of a crop of Eldorado. The same farmer says that five plants of each of 100 small potatoes produced 100 pounds. From two pounds of Eldorado in another instance, we realized 291 pounds after a struggle against caterpillars and aphids. The yield per root averaged about six pounds.

DOMESTIC HINTS.

To Dress and Cook Rabbits.—First twist head off and cut legs off; then with sharp blade of pocket knife rowwise of back, just through skin, midway between the shoulder and hips. Pull the skin off sideways. When nicely nude, singe. Then with keen-edged blade, holding rabbit in left hand (if you are right handed), cut carefully through outer coverings from breast bone to lower extremities. Take out carefully, skinning with one strain cautiously, without squeezing or tearing them. Then make soup with pure water. Cut up into pieces and place in vessel of clean water to soak over night. In the morning make your skillet quite hot, having put into it a lump of butter the size of an egg and twice the quantity of oil. Roll the pieces of rabbit in flour, place in skillet nicely and stew gently, fry for at least a half hour or for minutes. Salt and pepper to suit the taste. This is a fine dish for the family. Try it. You will like it. It is nearly done take out a few pieces and place in your wire broiler and place it on the coals of a wood or charcoal fire for about one or two minutes. Grandmother's Seed Cakes.—Cream half a cup of butter (rather scant) and two cups of sugar. Add four tablespoonfuls of sweet milk and one of vanilla or vanilla extract, and one good tablespoonful of murray seeds. Sift in flour enough to make a stiff dough that can be rolled into balls. Bake in a shallow pan for one hour. One tablespoonful of baking powder. This rule will take about two cups of flour.

Chaturabrand of Beef.—Take the undercut of a large sirloin, or the whole fillet, and cut it into two or three inch thick slices, slightly flatten them with a cutlet bat, trim off all skin and fat, let them lie for a short time in sweet oil, season with pepper, and broil over a clear fire. When both sides are nicely browned sprinkle the steaks with salt, and finish cooking more slowly. They should, however, be cooked so that the meat can be taken in turning them without the meat be not pierced, or the juices will escape. Mix together on a plate a small pat of fresh butter with finely chopped parsley, pepper, salt and lemon juice, put a bit on each steak, pour a little rich sauce round, and garnish the dish with fried potato straws. Serve very hot.

Virginia Benton Desserts.—To one quart of flour add one tablespoonful of butter and one-half teaspoonful of fine salt. Mix these well together using sweet milk or cold water, and mix until the dough is as stiff as can be handled; then beat and beat until it becomes soft and pliable. Roll out an inch thick, cut and prick with a fork and bake in a moderate oven hot oven until they turn a nice brown. Must be eaten at once.

Cornstarch Pudding Without Eggs.—One pint of new milk with six table-

paste; have hot, stir in sugar, and milk. Flavor with lemon

or vanilla,
and stir constantly until

Sponge Pudding.—One pint of sweet milk, one-half cup of sugar, one-half cupful of flour, one-half cupful of butter and five eggs. Wet the flour with part of the milk; then add the remainder and cook ten minutes; add butter and sugar while hot; when cool add yolks of eggs well beaten.

The Assassin is Identified.

Karl Hohenthal, Former University Student at Helsingfors.

The Assassination Was Due, It is Believed at St. Petersburg, to Political Causes—More Disorders and Killings in Russian Poland—Events of the Past Day Have Been Quite Serious—The War News—Will Kuroskopin Stay?

Helsingfors, Finland, Feb. 8.—The assassin of Solonin, Solonin, President-General of Finland, who was shot and killed Monday at his residence by a young man dressed in an officer's uniform, has been identified as Karl Leonard Hohenthal, formerly a student at the Imperial Alexander University here.

Hohenthal, who latterly had lived in Stockholm, returned to Finland, Jan. 13. He remained in Helsinki.

The assassin was removed yesterday from the Surgical Hospital, where he lies not fully conscious.

It was at first thought, that his meagre condition was the result of a drug, but his head was badly injured while he was being dragged downstairs after the murder.

See the Political Cause.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—The assassination of President-General of Finland, Solonin, yesterday, it is believed to be undoubtedly due to political causes. Solonin was long ago marked for vengeance by the Finnish Government, and he was regarded as more of a traitor to his country. The President-General had a reputation independent of and in some respects even superior to that of the Governor-General, and he also was the leader of the old Finnish movement, the influence of which is no longer predominant in the fleet, though it is still predominant in the Senate.

The crime is deplored by the Times, who still hope the Emperor would entertain the Diet's petition for a return to the Imperial Administration, and it is feared it will have a serious effect on the peace of mind of the Emperor. It is especially in view of the recent disorders in Helsingfors, in Finland, that it will have a serious effect on the peace of mind of the Emperor. It is especially in view of the recent disorders in Helsingfors, in Finland, that it will have a serious effect on the peace of mind of the Emperor.

BLOODSHED IN POLAND.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, Feb. 8.—Several men were killed here yesterday by strikers in haberdasheries and shoemakers, whose attempts were made to resume work. Many arrests have been made.

Strikers yesterday morning attempted to bring out the employees of the electrical plant of the Lomazay, but the doctors succeeded in preventing the strike.

According to a report from Ruzhyn, 24 workmen have been killed or wounded in strike disorders there yesterday, while at Nizhny, 24 have been killed and forty wounded.

Grave trouble is also reported at Kozlov, to-day. Troops have been sent to Kozlov.

About to go to Work.
Kozlov, Russian Poland, Feb. 8.—

The factories were opened yesterday morning, but scarcely any of the workers appeared. At one factory the men worked until lunch time, but then left and refused to return, saying they did not want to be killed by a shot from the street fired through the door.

The situation appears to be growing more and more critical. It is expected on Thursday, the date on which some of the largest employers have decided to pay their employees the balance of their wages, that there will be a general strike.

The strikers are becoming more aggressive. Yesterday morning they forcibly entered a mill and destroyed the machinery.

Setting Wreck in the South.
Baton Rouge, Canada, Feb. 8.—The strike situation here is growing more serious. It is practically at a standstill, although some strikers have decided to get away.

The Food is becoming more scarce. The military Government has issued a proclamation, warning the inhabitants against assembling in groups.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—The Berlin Telegram yesterday printed a report to the effect that Emperor Nicholas recently issued in his study a letter threatening him with assassination, an investigation of the emperor effected a semi-official statement.

Something For Treason.
St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—It is understood that Governor-General Trepov, the interior minister of Minister of Finance.

Bayoneted By JAPS.
Canton, China, Feb. 8.—The Japanese soldiers at Canton, China, yesterday bayoneted a Chinese soldier who was captured.

Will Kuroskopin Be Allowed to Stay?
The news of the high-placed influence which actuated for General Kuroskopin's removal after the battle of Liao-shan, are now endeavoring to influence the Emperor to accept his tender resignation. It is suggested that either Grand Duke Nicholas, Nicholas, a cousin of the Emperor, who commands the Russian Cavalry, Gen. Schuchow, Minister of War, or Gen. Kozlov, commanding the First Army in Manchuria, be appointed to succeed him.

National assembly sympathies with Gen. Kuroskopin, although the Northern Russian papers increasingly reiterate that the Russian military is good, and that only his leadership is bad.

The War That is On.
The great price lists resulting from the new currency of Russia, which is still in the hands of the Emperor, are so difficult and complicated that they have caused a general strike in the capital.

Setting Towards Peace.
The present current of peace and public opinion in Russia appears to be setting towards peace. The newspapers no longer proclaim the necessity of continuing the war, at all costs. Articles appearing in The Times and The New York Times, over the signatures of well known war correspondents, who have just returned from Manchuria, criticize the course of operations there in unmeasured terms, while these papers editorially declare that hopes of victory are remote.

The war has never been altogether popular. Present distress and discontent of the working classes, the general desire for reform referred to by the upper classes, may develop a strong peace movement with which the Government may have to reckon.

witnesses Train and Brendon were seated in the sitting room of the former discussing the crime. Brendon was gloomy, for in the unexpected death of Mrs. Jerrey he saw the downfall of his hopes of proving his legitimacy. "There's no chance of my marrying Dorothy, now," he said, with a sigh.

We have used "Sunlight Soap," and we want to tell you that it is the best soap made, that's why we are writing. We found out that the Sunlight way is the best way to wash with "Sunlight Soap." At first we used to wash with Sunlight Soap in the old way as we did with common soap, but after we washed according to directions printed on the package, we would never wash the old way again. We first soap the articles, leave them to soak and then rub out lightly on the wash board. Not much to do and it makes the clothes white as snow.

A department of mines is to be created, and it is expected that this will be one of the early acts of the new administration. The general public will have some time yet to choose who will

The new premier secured an appointment with the Lieutenant-Governor for 4.30, and at that hour the cabinet proceeded to the house to be sworn in. After the ceremony was over, the ministers had supper with his honor at the house. The house adjourned at 6.30. Major Hendrie had to leave early to catch a train for home and was consequently unable to attend the celebration ceremonies.

The first meeting of the baby administration was held this afternoon. Probably the first act of the government was to order the clerk to issue the writs for the cabinet except the minister of the portfolio will have to go back to the members of the cabinet. It is not likely that any of the ministers will be opposed.

The cabinet will also at the earliest opportunity fix the date for the opening of the legislature. It seems to be the idea that the house will meet within a month.

Two papers, following the New York Herald's lead, carried the Second Ward delegation were E. R. Hickman, E. Strachan Cox, Thomas Goring and W. Paris. The Queen's party numbered 100, including 100 processioneers. The band of the 68th had the honor of immediately preceding the carriage drawn by four horses controlled by the premier, Hon. J. A. Fay and Alexander Macdonald, representing the Central Conservative Association as president and secretary. A guard of honor from the Young Guard followed the Queen's carriage and preceded the carriage. Behind came the 22nd York contingent, then the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Ward associations, while the 22nd and 24th contingents, with a couple of hundred or more carriagees that tailed away at the end.

The impression left upon the average beholder was a confused one, in which the torchlight effects stood out most prominently. Who were the notables and who were the semi-notables, those rings of anxious citizens strained their eyes in vain to discover "Who's Who?" Whitney was question heard on all sides, even the prompt and distinct whistles failing to betray him in the uncertain light and the generally happy-go-lucky manner of conducting the affair.

The procession, as it moved along King and Yonge streets, was viewed by several thousand people. There were servative audience, even in the moment of their greatest collaboration, in joyous anticipation or in the most casual realization, are not altogether rewarded for sheer noise. It is the sincerity that counts and encourages, and no more loyal offering of homage could be made than that which the vast auditorium, pecked to standing room, tendered Premier J. P. Whitney as he came upon the platform. Long before the processionalists arrived the balcony and gallery were full. Ladies were there in force, a fact which was noticed by several graceful references from the platform to the power of the gentler sex.

There was no lavish decoration strung. Across the platform was the banner inscription, "WELCOME TO OUR LEADER." From it was suspended a large oil painting of Mr. Whitney, with the words "Our man - Our choice - Our man."

Clutter up! There can't be much more of it up there.

A narrow gauge path is better than none these days.

Let's fill your heart with wit.

When you find that there's only about a quarter of a ton left of the supply which you foundly hoped was going to last you all winter?

When Mr. Whitney started in this morning to shovel all the paths around the Parliament Hill, he began to realize, we opine, that the life of a Premier is not all cakes and hot sugar.

Let us regard war as a phenomenal one.

Both as regards war temperature and snowfall, but this winter his production has been such that far as snowfall is concerned, that isn't the game of a man whose ideas are influenced by the quality of mud he has absorbed, but is proved by statistics kept by the weather bureau.

There has been, so far, for this winter, more snow than fell during the whole last winter, and we still have about seven weeks to pile up the figure in.

And this was going to be a mild winter!

Will somebody get the little one, while we round up the weather prophets?

Speaking of the proposal to change the city seal, a prominent citizen of the city expressed his opinion that the corporation should not part with the House of Commons, anybody, but that it should be kept and maintained as a public recreation ground. There is not much likelihood that any private citizen would keep it, and it is very much feared that it would not be built on and thus forever lost as a recreation ground to the next generation of our city.

The city should, many people think, retain possession of the House of Commons and pay its share of the cost of a new building for the House of Commons.

It is not very long ago that the city made for the beauty of Belleville and the benefit of many Bellevillians yet present, even though it did raise the tax rate half a mill or so this year. We've had more work than that but with a mill in the past.

Judging by the blocks one sees on the streets these days, the open water has not hurt the crop.

But then who wants to talk about the ice crop while it is 16 2/3?

What Japan's Intentions Are.

After War is Ended Will Aim to be China's Principal Adverser.

Hikado's Ambition Now is to Invade a Small Portion of Russian Territory—Armies Closely in Touch All Along the Line of Front—Both Japs and Russians Harassing
Each Other—Vladivostok Blockade.

London, Feb. 11.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Tokio claims the best authority for the statement that Japan claims to have the right to establish itself in Peking as China's principal adversary.

The correspondent adds that the warship which Japan is expected to have purchased is said to be the Chinese battleship Cuirassier. The acquisition, he continues, were carried out by the Japanese. The orders for four large battleships have been placed in England, and also contracts for guns to the value of $2,500,000.

The Japanese ambition to have undoubtedly now is to invade a small portion of actual Russian territory, and an active stage of Vladivostok, therefore, is expected soon.

Rev. A. M. Hubby, now pastor of the Methodist Church, this city, while in St. Charles, Ill., president of the Ministerial Association. This weather may be healthy, but, if you believe this rhyme I'm longing for the gas stove, and The good old summer time.

There is every indication that the efforts of Mr. Deiter to give the stellar material attention will be properly appreciated by the people of Belleville. Judging by present indications there will be a bumper house when that stellar organization, the Pittsburgh Orchestra, will be next week. This is a matter for congratulation to the city, and will have glorious, indeed, and Mr. Deiter's piano, and the artistic venture, and financial loss.

Merchants are advertising spring goods, but spring poetry is just now a drug on the market.

You ought to try the muscle Trol Rings and I'm getting from the Belleville Gazette.

Talking of the Trol Ring, a property owner asked the other day why the idea never struck the authorities of building the new Trol Ring on the Commons, where there is a wide open space for the drill and land could be bought there.

Talking with a military man on the subject we were informed that the idea in question was not central enough to suit the officers at Ottawa. That's the only objection to it, but that looks to be a thoroughly sufficient one, doesn't it?

As Free For a Bell Under Thaw. True kind does not abound in any particular place. A collector on the streets of Belleville, looking for an example of how the ordinary thing is done, was surprised to find the presence of a little attractive figure of a girl stopped and a little girl carrying a large doll on her back. The collector came in to collect her. The little girl, who was about six, had a doll in her arms. He looked at it and then turned her back. The collector's expression was that of perplexity. The collector then turned down and asked her for the doll. The girl refused. The collector then turned back and asked her for the doll. The girl refused. ASSASSINATED SERGIUS

The Czars's Uncle Brought to Fragments by Terrorist's Bomb.

He Was the Leader of the Russian Revolution Party and Headed the Movement to Destroy the Czars's Government.

Moscow, Feb. 18.—While Grand Duke Sergei was passing through the Nicholas Palace from the Senate quarter, his carriage was followed by two men. One of them was dressed as a workman, and the other as a soldier. The workman threw a bomb at the Grand Duke's carriage. The soldier then threw a bomb at the workman. The force of the explosion broke all the windows of the Law Courts and the report was heard outside the city.

The carriage was blown to pieces, but the Duke himself was not hurt. The horses were not hurt and fled.

The Grand Duke was instantly killed. His head was blown off actually being separated from his body, while his body was left unharmed.

The workman was also killed. He was so frightfully injured by the explosion with which the bomb was exploded that he died before being taken to a hospital. The murderer was arrested.

Sergei was the son of Peterburg. St. Petersburg, Feb. 18, 4:50 p.m. The news of the tragedy in which Grand Duke Sergei was blown to pieces, a tremendous sensation in St. Petersburg, where the announcement by telephone excitement prevailed at Moscow, few particulars are ascertainable.

The tragedy in reality was no great surprise, as it was known that the terrorists had already commenced the Grand Duke to shoot, and the assassination of a bomb-throwing assassin had been reported.

It was Grand Duke Sergei, who was a brother-in-law, as well as uncle, of the Emperor, and who had exercised immense influence at St. Petersburg, was the most reactionary of the Grand Duke.

For several years and decades. As Governor-General of Moscow, the Grand Duke Sergei was extremely unpopular. His advent as Governor-General was followed by the administration of the Jews from the central provinces, and throughout the Administration his rigorous and harsh measures aroused the greatest hostility, especially among the students.

Two years ago, after the student riot, in which many were killed or wounded, several hundred exiles to Siberia followed under the orders of the Grand Duke Sergei, and General Tyrtov, now Governor-General of St. Petersburg, but who was then Chief of Police of Moscow. As there were many threats made against his life, the Grand Duke was obliged to flee to his summer residence, twenty miles from the city. During the recent strike disturbances in Moscow, the Grand Duke left the Ditchyathy Palace on the outskirts of the city, where he had been living, and took refuge in the summer residence of the Kremlin, where he had also lived in what is known as the little palace, the famous statue of Alexander II.

His trip to the Kremlin on that occasion was made at night, between small lines of troops.

Grand Duke Sergei was the wealthiest member of the Imperial family. He was tall, handsome, and confident in manner, in spite of the ruthless fashion in which he executed his authority. Governor-General, he was childless, but had adopted two children of his brother Paul, who was banished on account of a morganatic alliance. Sergei's record as a soldier was not brilliant.

He suffered a serious defeat at the hands of General Kuropatkin during the famous Korean campaign.

His death was a great loss to the Russian Empire. The Grand Duke is understood to have been condemned to death by the revolutionary party in December.

The Government's attitude of Maximilian was also known to the Grand Duke, according to a dispatch from Moscow on January 4, last, closely to the well-known assassin of the Emperor, retaining his position of commander-in-chief of the military district. Later in January, however, it was announced that the Grand Duke had sought refuge in one of the palaces of the Imperial family, and had been placed in the most reactionary of the Imperial family, as the head of which is referred to as the head of the Imperial family.

The Grand Duke Sergei was born in 1857 and was married to Princess Elizabeth of Hesse-Barmstedt, who was the daughter of King William of Prussia.

The death was committed by a single terrorist, who was a member of the Grand Duke's carriage a bomb-charge, which struck the Duke's carriage and killed him.

TRAINED TO KILL.
THE MEMBERS SHOT WITH SOFT BULLETS.

Paris, Feb. 15.—Parisians have met and something new and altogether sensational in the duelling line. This is a duelling club, where the members meet and talk about it at each other with pistols, pointing with words in the case of a fight. The most notable of the February 15, German and French duelling clubs, is the one at the means of vindictive their honor, and the members of the club are the purpose of exercising themselves in the duelling club, and the club is not a duelling club, but a club of duelling.

Every detail of a real duel is carried out in these mock encounters. The combatants choose swords, and physicians, who are members of the club attend. No one is ever seriously hurt, but they all experience considerable emotion at the combat, and, and declare that it gives them a sense of relief. The club is for the purpose of giving the members a sense of relief, and the club is for the purpose of giving the members a sense of relief.

The Economy of it.

Armour's Extract of Beef

As economy is what is a necessity. There's no "thousand and one" uses for it in the modern home. It's the cheapest of all stocks for soups, gravies and sauces. It makes the most delicious addition to chicken, turkey, beef and veal. It's so handy to have in case of emergency for luncheon and dinner—indispensable for the sickroom—always ready for use—instinctively.

FARM AND FRESIDE.

Timely Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

THE FARMER'S ICE HOUSE.

The reason of the year has arrived when the ice house may be filled. There is no reason why almost every house may have a continuous supply of ice throughout the summer.

An ice house may be constructed very cheaply after the following plan: Lay down a set of eight inch sleepers in diameter may be sunk into the ground to support the frame work.

Inside the posts two inch plank may be nailed on the posts and the plank completing the walls of the storage.

Inside the posts two inch plank may be nailed on the posts and the plank completing the walls of the storage. A door may be constructed of short pieces of plank.

In the filling of the ice house the ice is dumped on the inside by the ice itself and on the outside by the posts. As the ice is dumped it closes the doorway may be taken down one after the other.

STEAD ON THE THEATRE.

An English ecologist remarks that a very curious, if not unique incident, has recently taken place in connection with theatre-going. Mr. W. V. Reed, of the Barrow of Reed, who for 25 years has kept his Nonconformist conscience free from the sin of theatricalism, recently attended the theatre by his wife. The first half-dramas which were made within the last few months. Mr. Reed is said to be an orthodox, and he began by declaring vehemently that the theatre is being shamelessly neglected. By this he meant that play-goers do not take the theatre as an institution and only they go as spectators to the show, having no interest in its position as an educating, refining and elevating force.

The staunch Puritan would not count the theatre, but he would honor it and make it a power for good, a church, in fact. It is an illustration of the theatre's recognition by the people as a fellowship-institution in which every playgoer would have a responsibility, is the modernness of it as an amusement and recreation. It is a place for the middle and lower classes, who can pay for it. It is a place where the rich and the poor can meet on an equal basis. It is a place where the rich and the poor can meet on an equal basis.

When the Prince Wood Peggy

By RICHARD B. SEIZON

Copyright, 1905, by R. B. Seizon.

Peggy met him first at one of the Wednesday night shows at the Viceroy. He was somewhat more than passably good looking, and had a military build and German. His name was understood to be Alexander. He danced a number of times with Peggy, and finally they began to sit out dances in a quiet corner of the veranda, where, with their chairs close together, he talked to her in English with the faintest of German accents, and she replied in American made German that set them both laughing.

"The advent of the German was timely for Peggy. She had just fallen out with the frog, and being in the throes of a broken engagement, she was really in need of diversion. The German seemed to give good promise to this. He was well liked, possessed of that urbane finish that much travel can give, and was very much in the confidence with Peggy it was plain to be seen he was very much in love with her.

Peggy, ostensibly to relieve the keenest feeling in her heart, began a series of questions.

"How do you like the city?"

"I like it very much," he replied.

"What do you do for a living?"

"I am a writer," he replied.

"What kind of writing?"

"I write for the papers," he replied.

"What kind of papers?"

"I write for the papers," he replied.

A very unhappy girl, to whom the castle in Coburg was a nightmare.

And because of all these things the theme of Coburg-Gotha hardly occupied her mind.

It happened on August evening. The royal highness was paddling Peggy's canoe down the river.

Peggy gave the song no heed, she was watching a solitary figure in an approaching canoe. The figure was the prince in a small boat.

There could be no mistaking those broad shoulders and that curly brown hair. The two canoes drew nearer. The man in the other canoe looked at her with a smile.

The man smiled cordially and began to paddle faster.

Something seemed to clutch her throat. The prince was quite forgotten. She realized only that she was paddling out of the river.

"Don't stop," he cried.

He pointed with a finger a place in the river direction.

"Don't stop," he cried again, and so he still gave her back the trebly sound of his oars.

His royal highness gasped.

"Don't stop," he cried.

Peggy deliberately put one foot on the shore, and in a moment they were in the water.

When she came to the surface she was seized by a strong arm, and a hot red voice said to her:

"Don't stop," he cried.

"Don't stop," he cried.

"Don't stop," he cried.

"Don't stop," he cried.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

Maha is a regular daily institution in the home.

Set aside an hour for the children and preserve it sacredly from all other encroachments.

Every home where there are children should have its "children's hour," an hour when father and mother lay off the grown-up's mantle and become acquainted with the children in the guise of a playfellow.

It is the best hour for the mother to devote to the children of the house, and that some mothers may be either father or mother if only they are wise.

And so set aside each day an hour when the children may be sure of your company and good fellowship. Make it the hour of the serious and serious when all members are in the house.

There are many remarkable words and stock quotations.

Children's hour is a time when the children are sure to be sure of your company and good fellowship.

"Old Bleach" Linens

The procuring of "Best Qualities" in every line is a particular aim with us. In offering our new assortment of "Old Bleach" Linens we have no hesitancy in claiming them the worlds best.

- Here are some of their peculiar advantages.
- I. They are made of PURE FLAX only.
 - II. Elaborate precautions are taken to ensure perfect weaving.
 - III. They undergo the troublesome and tedious process of GRASS BLEACHING practised by our forebears who relied not on injurious and weakening chemicals, but on the generous rays of the sun to whiten their linen treasures.
 - OLD BLEACH thus retains the extraordinary natural strength which was justly claimed for Flax Fabrics in years gone by.
 - IV. They are finished without a grain of starch by OUR SPECIAL "OLD BLEACH" PROCESS—the only one which can produce the everlasting silky lustre and delightful soft, fine characteristic of OLD BLEACHED.

We have just received a shipment of "OLD BLEACH" Towels and Embroidery Linens direct from RANDALSTOWN, IRELAND and will be pleased to show you their good qualities at our staple counter.

"Old Bleach" Towels in "Poppy," "Narcissus" and other patterns as well as plain, each 35c, 45c, 50c, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25.

Advices German Court that War Will be Pushed With the Utmost Energy, the Domestic Situation Being Under Control—Thinks it Cowardly to Give Up While Possessing Essentials of Victory.

Berlin, Feb. 23.—The Emperor of Russia has decided to continue the war. His position is absolutely firm, and the German court has been advised that so.

Why He So Decides.
The Emperor's position is absolutely firm, and the German court has been advised that so.

Second—All the forces of criticism now directed against the Government for having fought rather than yield to legitimate interests, and for having failed to win victories, would be answered by added fury against the Government that accepted war and betrayed the country. A Government that would crave peace of Russia would not crave peace of Russia.

Third—The Emperor's position is absolutely firm, and the German court has been advised that so.

AGRICULTURAL ORANTS.

The resolutions passed at the Agricultural Convention and Exhibition, held in Toronto, February 19th and 20th, are likely to have far reaching effects. The agricultural societies of the Province have been using the money received from the sale of the tickets for the work they were doing. At the recent convention, as a result of the information furnished by the Provincial Superintendent H. B. Cowan, a resolution was adopted recommending that in future grants should be distributed to societies in proportion to the amount of money they expend for agricultural purposes.

It is probable that the Agricultural and Arts Act will be revised and this change made within a year or so. Should this be done, it will result in many of the smaller societies in the Province being out of aid and assistance in the Province which are doing good. An official acknowledgment of the returns made to the Department of the Provincial Superintendent of the Provincial Society of the Province should be made in order to make it worth while to work out. In a country in Eastern Ontario, where the district society has been devoting a great deal of attention to horse raising, the society will now $100 from the grant, which money is to be used for the work of the society. In the Western Ontario county the district society will receive an increased amount of $100, which will be taken from the grants of three small township societies. It will result in a great deal of the small societies will have to go out of existence and the district society will be strengthened, having two district societies in the grant.

In yet another county the grant to the district society will remain about $100, but the small township societies will lose $80, which will go to a third township society. Here is what they are: The district society will be strengthened, having two district societies in the grant. The small township societies will have to go out of existence. The district society will be strengthened, having two district societies in the grant.

The change in the assistance will place all societies on the same footing as the Provincial Society. The Provincial Society will be strengthened, having two district societies in the grant. The small township societies will have to go out of existence. The district society will be strengthened, having two district societies in the grant.

It is in an army. The position of any head master would be rendered unpleasant, and his usefulness would certainly not be increased. If the story came to his ears that a certain portion of the boys were being scolding against him, and with all due respect to the boys and authorities, he would be sure to let the boys know that he was not a head master, but a teacher.

"When I picked up the athlete I recognized it at once. It was my intention to take it round to her, so that she should not be incriminated, but it was no sport—she said the other day—that I forgot all about the matter. When I did it was too late, for Derrington had been told."

"Because he knew nothing about it," said Mrs. Ward. "I was sure he would tell you."

"I see how it is now. But I really did suspect Lois. I asked her if she had been to the house, and she said that she had, because she could do it."

"How did you bring her up?" asked Derrington. "I threatened to exhibit the athlete. Then she said the truth—it was the truth," said the woman.

"What a woman! She did not believe she killed the woman. Since she had put her hands on the body, and since there was no scene in her conviction, she must have known that she had been the dagger at Mrs. Jersey's feet."

"Bawley scratched his head. "I wonder who did kill Eliza," he muttered. "Lois is innocent. So was Miss Bawley. He looked at Brenda."

"I can't help it," replied George, grinning. "The thing is quite absurd. He said, 'I don't believe she killed the woman. Since she had put her hands on the body, and since there was no scene in her conviction, she must have known that she had been the dagger at Mrs. Jersey's feet.'" intended to recognize me as his sister. Therefore she was certain, as she may be sure, that I shall marry Miss Ward, and she will gradually get over her fury for me and will be content to let me take them."

"You mean to go to him, sir?" "Lena matters alone, Bawley. I shall go to him. I shall marry Miss Ward. I know what I shall change my name, take my rights and my share done with all this crime and mystery. The police will go on guard for me."

It is said that "Initiation is the sincerest flattery," and imitation creeps into everything—even a good brand of soap.

Red Rose Tea is very often imitated—but no man will imitate an inferior article. If Red Rose Tea is worth your money, it is worth your notice.
